INSIDE A SC CHURCH AREN'T PLEASED WITH DONATIONA PAYOUT

The family members of South Carolina church massacre victims are upset with the distribution of donations the church has received since June shooting. The Methodist Episcopal Church have decided that the families will have to divide $1.5 million in donations, while they will keep $1.8 million, with plans to make long-needed repairs to the church.

For instance, the wife of the Rev. Clementa Pinckney who was among those killed by white shooter Dylan Roof, has not received any of the donation proceeds.

Nothing will bring the victims of Charleston massacre back, but this money will help aid in bridging the gap in the loss of an income. Donations are important for these families since they did not receive a cent from the government.
